TRAIN KILLS MAN NEAR FITZHUGH

Fitzhugh, Oklahoma, July 26.—Monday about 8 p. m. a north bound freight ran over and killed an unknown man about half mile south of Fitzhugh. It is supposed that the man was drinking as there was a bottle laying by his side. He had his knife open and one shoe off. He has been later identified as John Judd who was working at Lawrence and his family lived at Roff. Justice Crowder is here today holding an inquest.

Stump Ashby May Run For Congress.

Oklahoma City, Ok., July 26.—"Stump" Ashby, member of two Oklahoma legislatures and former Populist leader of Texas, will probably be a candidate for congress from the Antlers district next year. During his residence in Texas Ashby was at one time candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Republican Populist fusion ticket.

GOSPEL TENT ON NORTH SCHOOL GROUND

At the meeting last night being conducted on the north school ground by the pastor of the First church of Christ the subject was "The Question of the Hour." "What Shall I Do With Jesus?" was a political question when Pilate first asked it, but it has long since become a religious one and its disposition settles a man's future one way or the other. It has rung its way through the centuries and presents itself to the present generation. There is a sense in which God is in the hands of a man now. Some day the scene will change and Christ will be judge. Turn ye, turn ye, why will ye die? Out of the moment eternal issues flow.

The subject for this evening will be "From Savior to Judge," a sequel to last evening's sermon.

"Should a Christian Keep the Sabbath?" will be discussed as a prelude to the sermon.

BIG SLUMP IN COTTON

PROSPECTS FOR BIG CROP SENDS PRICES TO LOW LEVEL.

New Orleans, La., July 26.—The worst smash of the season in the cotton market came today without any warning. The loss on the new crop months, the principal object of attack by the bear side, amounted to exactly forty points or $2 a bale. August, in which all that is left of the old crop interest is centered, lost thirty points or $1.50 a bale.

The decline was caused by heavy short selling which hardly let up for a minute during the day. Under the pressure the market gave ground steadily and on the way down stop loss orders from those traders who had gone long in anticipation of the long delayed reaction were constantly reached. This swelled the selling. The market had next to no support and there were no buying orders there came from sorts who wanted to realize profits.

Liverpool Starts Decline.

The decline began in Liverpool, and that market was so much under expectations on the opening here that initial prices were eight to ten points down. Without anything that looked like a recovery or a reaction of consequence prices fell until on the actual trading they were thirty to forty points under yesterday's final quotations. The close was fourteen to forty-five points down, bids and offers considered.

A turn for the worse in trade prospects in England and bearish expectations in connection with the August report on the condition of the American crop were the chief reasons for the heavy selling.

Day of Short Selling.

It was a day of short selling in the market. Rumors that one of the bull leaders who recently got a huge of long cotton was the best seller of the day and that he was accumulating a line of short cotton that would rival his recent holdings on the other side of the market. Short selling has been very free of late, but in no such volume as it was today. The gossip of the floor was all bearish. In the early trading the feature of the news was the extremely pessimistic claims made by English traders. They cabled over that the position of cotton was being affected by English politics, by impending strikes and by the failure of the monsoon, which was causing fear of another famine in India. One cablegram stated that Manchester was paralyzed through fear that the poor monsoon would result in wholesale cancellations of orders for cloths and yarns. Official cable message from the Manchester market bore out the claim that no business was doing.

Market's Bearish Gossip.

This was the last day in the period to be considered in the report on condition which the government will make on Aug. 2, and bearish gossip in connection with this report intensified the effect of the poor trade accounts from the other side. For some time it has been claimed by the majority of traders, and especially those who have been working for a reaction, that the coming condition report would show a falling off compared with last month, but today one of the private crop reporting bureaus came out with a report, or at least rumors said that such a report had been made, showing a gain in condition for the month of three-tenths of one point. This fitted in very well with the good crop reports from many sections of the belt.

Say Market Oversold.

At times selling was heavy by outside longs who came into the market as the reaction theory. Many circular writers today claimed in their letters to customers that under present conditions no reaction would be possible above 11c for the new crop. Bulls, however, contended that the market was dangerously oversold and liable to an upheaval at any moment.

Quotations in cotton are now surprisingly cheap when compared with the price prevailing only a few weeks ago. From the highest of the season there has been a drop of 256 points, over 2 1/2c a pound or over $12.50 a bale, on the July delivery, the position that the bull clique at one time threatened to push up to 20c.

On the new crop positions the decline has been almost as great. October having lost 228 points or $11.40 a bale.

TEXT OF NEW BOOZE MEASURE

Oklahoma City, July 26.—The work of securing the signatures of approximately 65,000 petitioners for a vote on the local option question will be begun at once, the bill prepared by the Oklahoma Local Option association having been approved by officers of that organization, as well as a number of citizens in various parts of the state. The bill is short and simple, and relates merely to a repeal of the present prohibitory laws. It follows in full:

"Be it enacted by the people of the state of Oklahoma:

Subdivision A.

"That section seven of article one, of the constitution of the state of Oklahoma, styled 'Prohibition and article submitting the same to a separate vote of the people,' and which was submitted to a separate vote of the people and adopted by the people of the state of Oklahoma at the general election of September 17, 1907, as a part of the constitution of this state, and which relates to the manufacture, sale, barter giving away transporting of or otherwise furnishing of intoxicating liquors within the state of Oklahoma, be, and the same is hereby repealed.

Subdivision B.

"The legislature at its next session shall enact laws permitting and regulating the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors in this state, and until such time as the legislature shall enact such laws in conformity to the foregoing, the laws heretofore enacted by the legislature of the state of Oklahoma, forbidding the manufacture, sale, barter, giving away transporting of intoxicating liquors shall remain in full force and effect, but immediately thereafter shall stand repealed and be of no effect.

"If the foregoing contained in subdivisions A and B shall be adopted by the qualified electors of this state, then all of that which is contained in subdivision B shall be and become a portion of the constitution of the state of Oklahoma and shall be known and designated as article one, section seven of such constitution."

PREMIER OF CANADA WANTS VOTE ON RECIPROCITY

Ottawa, Ont., July 26.—"Permit a vote to be taken in parliament on reciprocity or we will take a vote of the Canadian people on it without delay," was the ultimatum Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed to the conservative opposition in parliament Monday.

The chief obstacle to holding a general election to which the premier referred is that under the census which is just being taken, western Canada would be entitled to twenty or more additional members. The census will not be completed until October and a law giving the west its increased representation cannot be passed for some weeks after that.

If an election is held after that law is enacted the west will be under-represented in parliament for at least several months.

THE DAY IN DISTRICT COURT

JURY IN PEEL MILLS CASE DISAGREES—JIM ROBERTSON 10 YEARS—J. B. TAYLOR ON TRIAL.

The jury before which Peel Mills was tried on a charge of horse theft, wrestled with the case until about 9:30 this morning when, it appearing that no agreement could possibly be reached, the court discharged the jury from further consideration of the case. It is understood that the vote was five for conviction and seven for acquittal. Mills' bond was fixed at $1,000 and he has probably made it by this time.

The trial of Jim Robertson, the negro charged with committing rape on Eliza Hudson, a negress, was brief. After a short deliberation a verdict of guilty was returned and his punishment fixed at ten years in the penitentiary. The crime was committed in the vicinity of Stonewall. The negro confidently expected an acquittal, and was somewhat surprised at the verdict. On the way down stairs to the jail, he asked the deputy: "Do you reckon they would give any more if I hollered?" He declared that he would appeal the case.

This morning J. B. Taylor, charged with killing Clayton Copeland near Tyrola about June 1, was placed on trial. Considerable difficulty was experienced in securing a jury, and it was not until three o'clock that the first witness was placed on the stand.

Following is the list of jurymen: W. L. Howard, I. G. Napier, H. V. Smith, W. A. Price, D. E. Martin, E. H. Miller, J. A. Williams, F. A. Dalley, C. P. Fulton, G. C. Ooliver, G. W. Herndon, W. H. Matthews.

LEAD AND ZINC MINING IN ARBUCKLE MOUNTAINS

Davis, Okla., July 25.—Leading business men of this place have organized a mining exchange for the protection of the public against wild cat mining, following the discovery of rich zinc and lead deposits in the Arbuckle mountains. No mining company will be listed on the exchange until its titles to leases have been examined and found free of litigation or incumbrances of any kind.

Extensive investigation has been made of the mining field here and it is the opinion of those conducting the investigation that this will shortly become the center of the southwest's zinc and lead mining. The field is practically undeveloped, but mining experts who have been here for the past two months predict that much activity will be seen within the next few months.

Deep Idaho Lake.

Spokane, Wash., July 26.—Scientific investigations conducted for the federal government by John Freeman Bovard, professor in biology at the University of Oregon, and Dr. George Irving Kenimerer, professor in chemistry at the University of New Mexico, have disclosed the fact that Lake Pend Oreille, in northern Idaho, is the deepest body of water in the Spokane country. The work thus far indicates that the lake has a much greater depth than 1,000 feet in the center. Other lakes range from 65 to 200 feet. The experts were sent to this district at the request of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of determining the food and game fish best adapted to the numerous waters. They take the temperature of the water at various depths, analyze it for plant life and make other tests. It is probable that Pend Oreille lake will be stocked with dee plake trout, Lake Superior white fish and other species not known to these waters at the present time. Other lakes in Northern Idaho and eastern Washington will be investigated at once.

FOUR YOUTHS CHARGED WITH SERIOUS OFFENSE

Chandler, Okla., July 25.—Four youths, ranging in age from 15 to 20 years, are in jail here Tuesday night, charged with criminally assaulting and seriously injuring two girls, 14 and 16 years old respectively, at Agra, thirty miles from here; one of the girls is in a critical condition at the Chandler hospital; and the town of Agra is so wrought up over the crime that a lynching is feared if the prisoners are taken to their homes. Orley and Ollie Sears, Charles Endicott and Rolla Sellers, the young men charged with the crime, were arrested in Bartlesville Tuesday morning. They left Agra Sunday, when they learned that the attack, made last Thursday, had been reported to the authorities. They were brought here Tuesday afternoon. The train went through Agra without the irate populace learning that they were aboard in charge of officers.

Girl Did Not Die.

It was erroneously reported Tuesday that Ina Newman, 14 years old, had died from her injuries. This report aroused the citizens of Agra to a frenzy and threats of lynching were freely made on the streets there. Miss Newman is not seriously injured. Mary Maringer, the other victim, who was assaulted by three of the four boys, is in the hospital here.

According to the story told the authorities here, Roy Scott, who will be the principal witness for the prosecution, invited the Meringer girl to go driving. They picked up Ollie Sears and the Newman girl. After they were some distance from town, Sears suggested that the Scott boy and Miss Meringer get out, promising to drive down the road and return in the meantime. When they had done so, they were attacked, they say by Orley Sears, Charles Endicott and Rolla Sellers.

Young Scott was forced to run by the other boys. After the assault the crowd waited until Ollie Sears returned with the buggy. Both girls were placed in it and driven to their homes.

The prisoners do not deny their crime, but refuse to discuss it.

Values Will Be Increased $250,000,000.

Oklahoma City, July 26.—As a result of the effort of the state board of equalization to bring all taxable property in Oklahoma up to a cash valuation for the purpose of taxation, the total assessment of property in the state will be increased this year $250,000,000. The state board has already raised the public service corporations approximately $100,000,000, and the returns by the counties on property assessed locally showed an increase of nearly $100,000,000 over last year's returns. The indications were at last week's hearings that the board would raise the counties about 50 percent. Final action along that line will be taken by the board at its meeting on Wednesday. The total valuation last year was $906,384,388, which would make this year's valuation nearly a billion and a quarter.

Some such raise as this is absolutely necessary in order to enable the state to raise sufficient money to pay current expenses and back debts without exceeding the constitutional limit on the state tax levy. The state board last year made the state levy but 1 1/4 mills, and the result was that the old administration went out leaving the state with an indebtedness of nearly $2,500,000. A similar amount was appropriated for the current year by the 1911 legislature, so that even with an increased valuation a levy of probably 3 mills will be necessary to put the state in the clear.

Deeds to Seminole Lands.

Washington, July 26.—Announcement was made today at the Interior Department that issuance of patents to Seminole Indian land in Oklahoma would begin at once upon showing by the allottees that no fraud exists and upon application to J. George Wright Commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes at Muskogee.

Deeds to lands in the Seminole Nation are the only ones in the Five Civilized Tribes that have not been issued, although allottees for years have been selling land to real estate speculators.

Although the next state election is three years in the future, political wisecracks are already figuring out a slate for that interesting time.

For governor Jesse Duhne, Jno. R. Williams, and Bill Murray are said to be probabilities with R. H. Wilson, state superintendent a possible candidate, Robert Dunlop, J. J. McAlester, and W. B. Anthony are also mentioned in this connection, a list sufficiently strong to indicate that the campaign will not be a slow one. The U. S. senatorship will also be a prize that will tempt a number of patriotic citizens. Naturally Senator Gore will be in the race against him in the first campaign, will try his luck again. Jack Love figures on being given another term as corporation commissioner without opposition.

However, 1914 is very far in the future and there may be changes in the complexion of the state before that time that will make possible a slate not now thought of.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

The prohibition campaign in Texas is all over but the shouting—that is for the present, but like Banquo's ghost, it is a question that never sleeps. We doubt if even a lull in the scrap follows the election because it was so close that the defeated side will feel like trying it again at first opportunity. Its immediate effect, however, will be felt in the state campaign of next year. Each side will try to punish the other, and as a result the political graveyard of Texas will be largely increased, and the number of fresh mounds beneath which sleep the blasted hopes of disappointed politicians will be legion. No matter which side a man may have taken in the present fight, the opposing crowd will strive to encompass his defeat, and in many cases will accomplish this end. Gov. C. C. Quinn will be the chief object of attack on the part of the prohibitionists, and the enemies of Joe Bailey may also make another attempt to get his goat. No matter who wins he has a real scrap before him.

Under Six Flags.

To Greer county and other counties formerly embraced within its area belongs the distinction of having been under the flags of no fewer than six nationalities, besides having been a part of two different states, a record surpassing that of any other patch of territory that Uncle Sam's flag floats over.

At the beginning of the eighteenth century France claimed that section as a part of Louisiana, just as she claimed all of Texas on the basis of La Salle's settlement. Later Louisiana was ceded to Spain, and the flag of the dons theoretically, at least, floated over Greer county. Then when Mexico won her independence from Spain, the tri-color was the flag of the empire of Greer in common with the rest of Texas. However, before that flag had been much more than unfurled, along came the Texas revolution, and the lone star flag of the husky young republic waved. Nine years later came annexation to the United States and the star spangled banner replaced the lone star. Then came the civil war and with it the flag of the Confederacy, the sixth.

Long in dispute, Greer county was organized and governed by the state of Texas, but when by a decision of the supreme court, it became a part of Oklahoma, the sturdy Texas pioneers transferred their allegiance and applied themselves with zeal to the task of making a prosperous state out of the material at hand. With her immense area, Texas scarcely missed Greer county, but the addition of that rich little piece of territory to Oklahoma was no small thing to the latter.

A man saved forty cents a day for forty years by cutting out cigars and was enabled to buy a country home in New York. Where would he have been had he cut out meat and coffee and sugar? By this time he would be the owner of a two-story building.—Tulsa Democrat.

It appears that emboldened by their success in Texas, the whisky element of Oklahoma is bent on forcing a third election on Oklahoma. Initiative petitions are already being circulated, and Oklahoma seems doomed to suffer a nerve-racking campaign, although after all the turmoil the state has passed through during the past five years there was never a time when a little rest and attention to business was worse needed. Nor will there be any improvement if the anti-carry, for then local option elections will be in order all over the state, and this much vexed question will be kept alive for years to come. Such, however, is the fruit of the much lauded initiative and referendum.

ANOTHER WOMAN BOOZE SMASHER APPOINTED

The second woman in the state to hold a commission as an enforcement officer is Mrs. E. L. Kraeer of Bartlesville, and she was today appointed by Governor Cruce. Mrs. Kraeer can now make raids as any other enforcement officer and it is understood she has been very active in assisting the officers in Bartlesville. However, she same authority as the officers so she could conduct raids herself. Immediately upon receiving her commission it is understood that she had complaints sworn out for all the booze joints in the town and she went to work.

Mrs. Kraeer has been very much interested in the enforcement of the laws in her home city, especially as to the prohibition law, and the commission as a full-fledged enforcement officer will be an advantage to her in carrying on her work.

The Girl of My Dreams

A Novelization of the Play by Wilbur D. Nesbit and Otto Hauerbach

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I. Harry Swift is spinning along in his auto, his thoughts dwelling in happy anticipation of a coming from his fiancée, Lucy Medders, who nursed him when he was injured in an auto accident out in the country. His mind taken off of his surroundings by these pleasant thoughts, he crashes into another auto containing German Count and a beautiful woman. The woman's hat is ruined. Absent-mindedly Harry thrusts the remnants of it at his pocket and makes his escape.

CHAPTER II. Carolyn, Harry's sister, goes to play bridge. She sees first a distant relative of Lucy's, and then a hat intended as a gift to Lucy is traced to a home by the German Count and the lady of the dinner.

CHAPTER III. The Count develops a plan to play Lucy's card game in a most brilliant way. He hears of her and a state of the ruined hat has been delivered to Harry's house. It is found that the Count had been in the house. Lucy insists that he knows nothing about Lucy Medders and her father arrived at the Count is seated in the library and Mrs. Blazes in Harry's bedroom.

CHAPTER IV. Lucy professes curiosity regarding the room in which Mrs. Blazes is hidden and Harry is forced to do some fancy lying.

CHAPTER V. The milliner arrives to make the duplicate hat. She proves to be Daphne Daffington, whom Harry has shown considerable attention to in the past and the situation becomes more complicated. She agrees to make another hat providing Harry will take her to dinner. Lucy and Carolyn call Harry and Daphne is hustled into the room occupied by the Count. The Count and Daphne seem to have carried on a flirtation before and greeted each other warmly.

CHAPTER VI. The Count asks Daphne why she had left him standing on a corner waiting for her one evening, she explains that she met a dear friend and had accompanied him to dinner. The Count had given her a ring on a former occasion and demanded its return. Daphne explains that she had given it to General Blazes, at that the Count was in a state of mind bordering on insanity as he had given Mrs. Blazes a duplicate of the ring that her husband had. Daphne and the Count exchange bitter words and Daphne refuses to stay in the same room with him, so she enters the room that Mrs. Blazes is concealed in.

CHAPTER VII. Harry and Lucy enter the room, accompanied by Mr. Medders, who was busy looking around the house and before Harry could stop him had opened the door of the library, where the Count was concealed. Explanations followed and the Count played the role of Harry's German tutor. Harry is forced to tell what he has learned and the Count assists him, the deception proves a success.

From Monday

man scholar—some day," he asserted. Harry beamed with pride—and amusement. Mr. Medders observed to him:

"Verily, thy tutor must be a learned man."

"He reads nothing but the classics," Harry replied. "You'll always find him in the library. He's dying to get back there now, I expect."

"And no doubt that is a classic he hath in his hand even at this moment," Medders said.

"I've no doubt," said Harry, taking the book from the Count's hand and glancing at the title, which was "Three Weeks." "Ah, it is an old treatise on the brevity of time."

He tossed the book into the library, and said:

"Now, I don't want to have to think of any more German today. This is to be a real holiday. Count, and I refuse to study any more."

"I think thee art doing a great work," Lucy said to the Count, "to teach Harry German. It is fine that he hath thee for a tutor. How did thee happen to be engaged by him?"

"Merely by accident," the Count answered.

"Yes," Harry added, "through a mere accident."

CHAPTER VIII.

Harry felt that there was nothing he could do which would sufficiently show his gratitude to the Count. Everything was straightening out nicely. To get rid of the Count would be simple. As his German tutor, what could be more natural than for the Count to put on his hat and walk away? And then there was the quick manner in which the Count had rallied to his support. Evidently, in spite of his grievance, the Count was a man who would not stand or sit idly by and see a fellow man suffer because of a mistake, or a combination of mistakes.

With a quiet wink to the Count, Harry said to Lucy and her father:

"I want to take you around the grounds a bit, now. Count von Fitz will excuse us, I know."

"Most certainly," the Count replied, grandly. "Und I vill pursue my studies."

But more noise was heard from the hallway, and Harry flinched. He could not imagine what further trouble fate had in store for him, but he had experienced so much in this brief time, and his nerves were on such a wire edge, that he knew any unusual noise meant trouble, and any unusual silence might mean worse.

"What can it be?" Lucy asked in alarm.

"Let us go and see," Medders said. They were saved the effort, for Carolyn came running in, her eyes big with alarm, and her face white with fright. She rushed to Harry and clung to him.

"Oh, Harry!" she cried. "That terrible old General!"

"Gott!" the Count exclaimed, turning toward the library. "He has discovered me!"

"What is it, Carolyn? What about the General?" asked Harry.

"There, there, my girl," soothed Mr. Medders. "Calm thyself."

"Do tell us what has frightened thee," Lucy begged, taking Carolyn's hand in hers and patting it.

"General Blazes," Carolyn said, straightening herself up and catching her breath. "General Blazes is coming, and he swears he will do desperate things. Harry, Oh, I am so afraid."

The deep voice of the General boomed from the hall.

"Where is she?" he shouted. "Where is she? I want my wife, I tell you!"

He stormed into the den and confronted them. He stalked up to Harry, brandishing his cane.

"Where is my wife?" he clamored.

"You scoundrel! Where is my wife?" Harry waited until the General had run out of breath; this procedure also allowing him to collect his wits. Then he asked:

"Why, General, what in the world is wrong?"

"Everything's wrong! You're a scam doundrel! I'm a fam dool! My wife is a ficked wirt—I mean a wicked flirt!"

"It's coming in bunches," Harry thought to himself. He determined that, even though the General had reason to believe his wife was in the house, he would affect to misunderstand him and thus disarm him.

"Why, General," he said, "you're excited."

"You bet I'm excited!" the General yelled, shaking his cane in the air, while Lucy and Carolyn shuddered and held each other tight, behind Mr. Medders, and the Count stood ready to jump into the library if the fury of the General should be directed at him.

"My Wife Is In There."

"You bet I'm excited. I'm as loopy as a crane—I mean crazy as a loon. I want my wife, I tell you. Where is she?"

"Well, General," Harry replied stiffly. "I'm not running a guessing contest, you know."

"None of you nam donsense! You know where my wife is!"

Mr. Medders stepped forward with his hand raised to calm the General, and, speaking to Harry, asked:

"Knowest thou aught of his wife, Harry?"

"I don't know what can be the matter with him," Harry evaded.

The Count sidled toward the door into the hall, saying meekly:

"I think I am going, now."

The General stopped him with a flourish of his cane, and shouted:

"You stay right here! You may know something of this."

Lucy now found a chance to ask something.

"What is it the man sayeth of thee, Harry?" she asked.

Before Harry could reply to her the General demanded:

"Has my wife been here today?"

"I can answer for him," Lucy replied, gently. "No strange woman has been here."

The General looked puzzled. He took off his hat, tucked his cane under his arm, and mopped his brow.

"That's remarkable," he said. "My wife telephoned from this house not half an hour ago. They told me so at the millinery store down the street. I stopped there to inquire for her."

"They must have been mistaken," Harry said. "It is just possible that they had the number mixed. I don't believe they even know who we are here. We don't deal with them."

"Well, Harry," the General said, slowly, looking from one to the other of the faces before him, and realizing that he had been in error. "I'm sorry I made such an ass of myself. You don't know what it is to be worried about a wife—yet. You'll pardon me, won't you?"

"Why, certainly, General," Harry said, grasping his outstretched hand. "Let bygones be bygones and all that. I know how you feel. I've been worried once or twice myself—but not about a wife."

"Well, my boy, your time will come," sagely promised the General. "I trust the ladies will pardon me, and you gentlemen, also."

Lucy and Carolyn, Mr. Medders and the Count cheerfully forgave him and he started out, when—Oh, luckless fate!—from the room where Daphne and Mrs. Blazes waited, came a sneeze. It was not a stifled sneeze, it was not a weak, apologetic sneeze—it was a big, whole-souled sneeze—sneeze that told by its very sound that it had been held back as long as

There's Not a Store In Town

That Would, In Six Months From Now Be Half as Important as it is Now, if it Should Stop Advertising During That Time!

Isn't that perfectly true—perfectly logical? Can you imagine any store of which it would not be true?

And, if true, does it not follow that the reverse of the proposition is true, too—that the store that doubles its accustomed advertising for the next six months will also double its accustomed store growth for that period?

And does not this, also, apply to any store you can think of in this town?

possible and was glad to be given its liberty! The General flamed into wrath, and whirled on his heel to confront Harry.

"Ha!" he exclaimed. "My wife's own sneeze! I'd know it among a million. I'd recognize her sneeze in the midst of a battle. It's no use to bamboozle me. My wife is in there!" He leveled his cane at the door as though about to fire a volley through the panels. Harry clutched a chair back to steady himself.

Mr. Medders came over to Harry slowly, waving a hand at the General to inform him that he would take charge of the case from now on.

"Harry," he said, seriously. "What does this mean?"

"I don't know," Harry replied. "I'm guessing, just as much as anybody else."

"Thee would not let me look in there!" Lucy said, accusingly.

"Oh, Harry!" Carolyn wept.

The Count chewed his mustache and trembled.

The General's eyes were now blazing. He awaited the denouement.

Harry looked at them all. Save Carolyn he could find no sympathy.

Suddenly he reflected that, after all, he was blameless. He would open the door, allow Mrs. Blazes to come out, and throw himself on Lucy's mercy. He stepped to the door, yanked it open, and—

With a complacent smile out stepped Daphne Daffington.

"That is not my wife!" shouted the General.

"It seems impossible to escape you, my dear General," Daphne said sweetly. She swept out with as much grandeur as she could muster—and Daphne could muster a plenty.

Disgusted with himself, the General whirled about and stamped away.

"I told him his wife wasn't here," Harry said, turning to Lucy. But she was weeping in her father's arms, while Carolyn was huddled on a couch crying. The Count stepped up to Harry.

"I got you out of dis yet!" he said.

CHAPTER IX.

The group stood in a dead silence, broken only by the stifled sobs of Lucy and Carolyn, while the heavy tramp of General Blazes died away in his slamming of the outer door.

Harry shook his head doubtfully, as the Count continued to assure him in dumb show that he could clear things up for him.

"Come, daughter," Mr. Medders said, "thee must quiet thyself. Then we will go home."

"Aren't you going to give me a chance to explain?" Harry asked.

"Explain!" Carolyn blazed forth, looking up at them with her eyes red and her cheeks stained with tears.

"Explain! How can you explain? Oh, dear! I never should have gone away to school. I should have stayed at home and done my duty by my brother."

"Nonsense, Carolyn," Harry reproved her. "You simply make things look worse for me by such talk as that." "How could they be any worse for you?" Carolyn demanded. "Oh, men are wretches! I suppose they are all alike. I thought I could trust my own brother. I—I—even doubt—Pigeon, now!"

SURPRISE STORE

When in its youthful bloom.
And when it first came to Ada,
It was in a very small room.

It was then we labored and toiled
And struggled night and day;
The people came to see us,
And never turned away.

But now it is standing
And looking o'er the land.

The cause that made it larger now,
Than when in its youth,
Is, when the people came in,
They always heard the truth.

But we don't want to take advantage of that fact in order to sell you inferior flour. Ada flour stands on its own merits and is second to none in the state. Remember that our mill pays taxes in your city and county.

So try our flour and if you like it continue to buy it thus helping to build up a home institution.

MATCH ALMOST CAUSES BAD FIRE

About 11:30 this morning the fire whistle was sounded and the boys made a quick run to the residence of Joe Deckert on West 13th street, but found that their services would not be needed.

The trouble was caused by some children playing in the barn. A lighted match set fire to some shucks and for a few minutes the situation was a trifle dangerous. However, a few buckets of water were rushed to the scene and the fire extinguished almost as soon as it started.

AWFUL PAINS FULLY DESCRIBED

A Lady of Pizarro Tells Story of Awful Suffering That Cardui Finally Relieved.

Pizarro, Va.—"I suffered for several years," writes Mrs. Dorna A. Smith, "with that awful backache and the bearing down sensations, so fully described in your book."

"I tried doctors and other medicines and found little relief, until I was induced to try Wine of Cardui, when I found instant relief and today I can heartily recommend Cardui to all suffering women and think there is no other as good."

In some instances, Cardui gives instant relief; in others, it may take a little time. But in all cases of female trouble Cardui can be depended on to be of benefit, as it is a specific remedy for women and acts in a curative way on the womanly organs.

As a general tonic for women, to build up your strength, improve your appetite, bring back rosy cheeks and make you look and feel young and happy, nothing you can find will do so much for you as Cardui.

A GOOD REASON.

Ada People Can Tell You Why It Is So.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure the cause of disease, and that is why the cures are lasting. This remedy strengthens and tones up the kidneys, helping them to drive out of the body the liquid poisons that cause backache, headache and distressing kidney and urinary complaints. Ada people testify to permanent cures.

W. F. Jones, East Eleventh St., Ada, Okla., says: "It is over a year and a half since I used Doan's Kidney Pills and received a cure from a severe case of kidney complaint. There was a dull ache through my loins and too frequent passages of the kidney secretion caused me much annoyance. I tried a number of remedies, but received only temporary relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. I have had no occasion to take a kidney remedy since then, as the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected has proven to be a permanent one."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.
